Marine gets a bird's eye view of Oahu, 'the Gathering Place'

Story and Photos by
Sgt. Robert Carlson
Press Chief

When this Hawaii Marine thinks about an 'around the island tour,' or a 'Sunday ride,' he's not thinking of the kind of road trip most residents of Hawaii consider. He does his sightseeing from above — at more than 120 mph — and there's hardly ever any traffic.

Sergeant Mike Ramaha, a heavy equipment mechanical engineer with 1st Bn., 12th Marine Regiment, has been flying for more than six years, and takes to the skies at least twice a month.

"I was bored with most of the off-duty activities offered in Okinawa, and someone suggested I join the aero club there," Ramaha said. "Within six months, I had my private pilot's license and was flying solo."

Ramaha learned to fly through training at the Kadena Aero Club in Okinawa, Japan, under the instruction of off-duty Air Force F-15 pilots. He conducted his training flights on the weekends, and before his deployment was over, he had his certification.

The aero club in Okinawa offers a licensing program which is almost a third of the cost of a commercial flight school.

At a time when Marine lance corporals were not even allowed to drive on Okinawa, the Antioch, Calif., native was flying high above the Japanese island.

Once he was stationed in Hawaii, Ramaha quickly found Oahu Aviation, and began booking flights through the company to keep his certication current, and to see more of the island.

"I feel a strong sense of freedom when I fly," he said. "My wife and son really enjoy it too."

Ramaha usually flies a Cessna 172 single-engine plane, and he said the air traffic is heavier in Hawaii than in Okinawa, but the sightseeing is a thousand times better.

"I can fly up to the North Shore, around the island, or to a different island in just an hour or two," he said. "Oahu's skies are very serene, and the weather here is great most of the time."

The view from above is different, and the feeling he gets flying through the air is great, but Ramaha said the reason he wanted to learn to fly was to do something challenging.

"I'm afraid of heights," he said. "And I wanted to master my fears."

For information about flying lessons and pilot certification, contact Oahu Aviation at the Honolulu International Airport by calling at 834-7100.

House hunting on the North Shore and watching sailboat races are just two of the benefits of a pilot's license.

With a view like this, the Ramaha family never gets lost in the maze. Flying above Oahu's beaches, mountains, canyons, and man-made monuments provide a whole new perspective.

Take-offs and landings are a little hectic at an international airport.

New coordinator takes on SM&SP

Debbie Robbins
MCCS Public Relations

From Semper Fitness to Semper Fi, she has put her knowledge, talent and leadership into physical fitness expertise for the Marine Corps Community Services Semper Fitness Center the past three-plus years. Her ability to motivate, manage and relate to patrons make Leslie Graham the ideal candidate for the Single Marine and Sailor Program coordinator position. One of the aspects that attracted Graham to the SM&SP is event coordination. Currently, the SM&SP hosts a variety of activities such as sporting tournaments, volunteer projects, mentoring and coaching youth in the community, as well as excursions around Oahu and to outer islands. Determined to strengthen the program’s present six core elements of activism, recreation, health and wellness, community involvement, life skills and career progression, Graham intends to implement a “Greeting Effort” and an “Automobile Show.” Graham is quick to share her enthusiastic goals for the SM&SP, but notes that the most important aspect of her job is to make single, active duty military members aware that this program is for them and they have a positive alternative for recre-

Hawaii’s military musicians unite for annual concert

Sgt. Alexis R. Mulero
Community Relations

The best musicians from the U.S. Air Force, Army, Coast Guard, Marine Corps, Navy and Hawaii Army National Guard combined their talents in an extraordinary concert at the Hawaii Theatre on Saturday.

The 17th Annual Combined Armed Forces Band Concert is a part of Hawaii’s month-long celebration in appreciation of military service members.

This year’s theme was “Enduring Freedom” in tribute to America’s fight against terrorism.

The free-of-charge event kicked off with the “Star Spangled Banner,” sung by Air Force Master Sgt. Debra Jamison.

Various Hawaii military band ensembles then played Broadway, jazz, and Dixieland tunes such as “When the Saints Go Marching In.”

In addition to listening to well-known rhythms and songs, guests were treated to an original song by Air Force Senior Master Sgt. Larry MacTaggart entitled, “Lest We Forget.” The song was written to honor the men and women who serve in the U.S. military.

After the intermission, the bands united and harmonized to patriotic music such as the “Freelance March” and “God of Our Fathers,” led by Conductor Chief Warrant Officer 3

Alexander K. Gray, director of the Marine Forces Pacific Band.

Service songs ended the concert, and guests stood up and cheered for their favorites as well as world-renown Composer John Phillip Souza’s “The Stars and Stripes Forever,” which capped the evening.

“This [combined] concert is the greatest reflection of working together as a team [for us bands] after the Sept. 11 incident,” Gray said.

Sgt. Alexis R. Mulero

Marine Sergeant James M. Stanley and Marine Staff Sgt. Brian Hollett (seated in the center row), both of the Marine Forces Pacific Band, performed during the concert on Saturday.

DECA to award scholarship to Kalaheo student

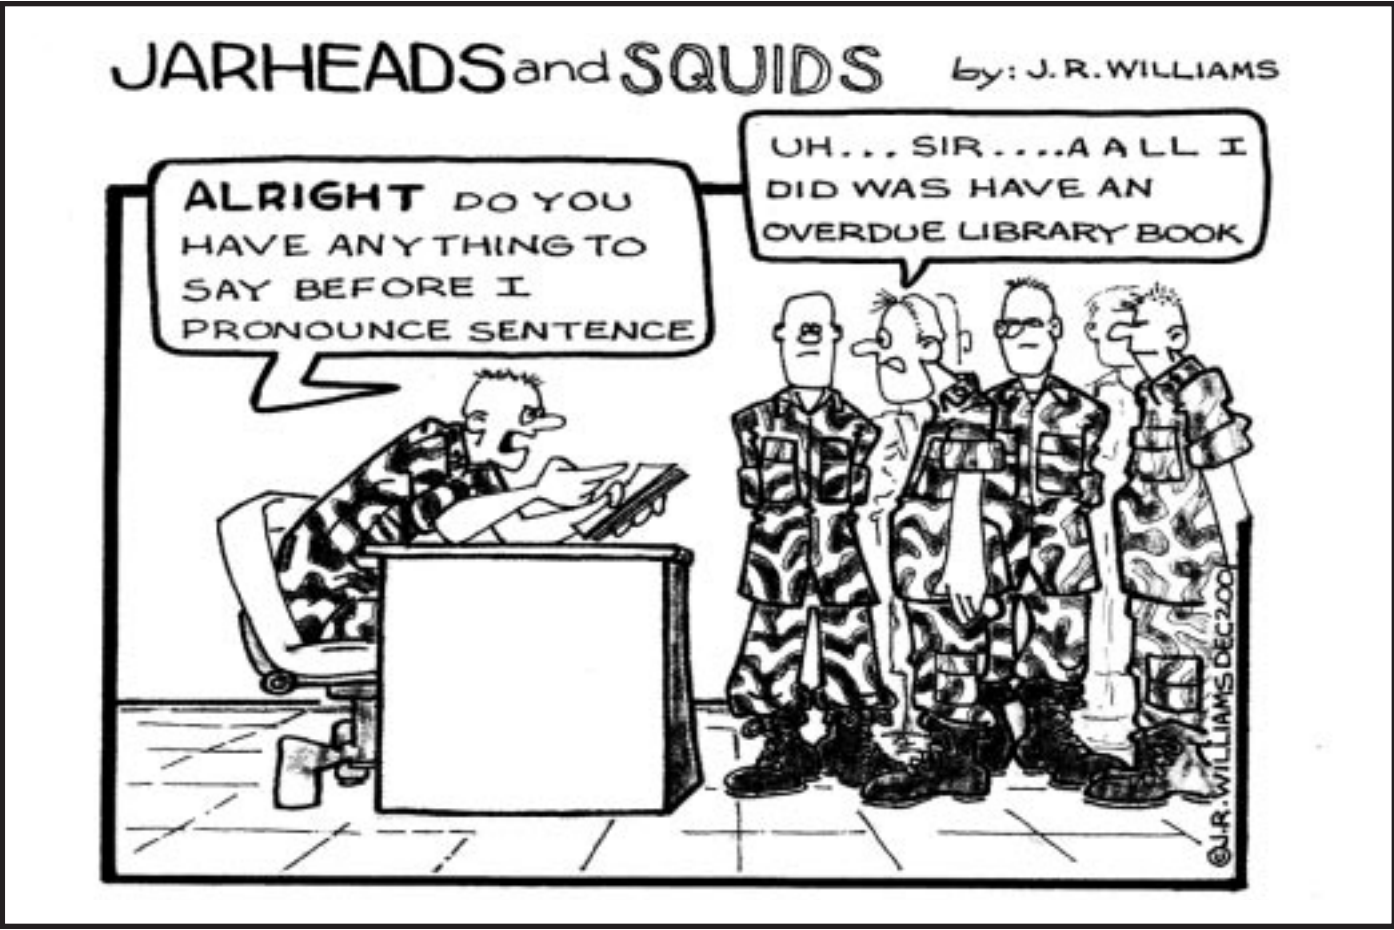

Bonnie J. Powell
DECA Media Relations

FORT LEE, Va. — The Scholarships for Military Children program is scoring a 4.0 in its sophomore year. Worldwide, 520 military children have earned $1,500 scholarships to help them combat the higher cost of education in the fall of 2002.
“I’m delighted to announce that the number of scholarships going to outstanding students in 2002 exceeds last year’s total by 30 percent, said Defense Commissary Agency (DeCA) Director Air Force Maj. Gen. Robert J. Courter Jr. “We couldn’t be happier with the positive response to the program, the growth of the program, and the caliber of both the applicants and recipients.”

ADAMS

“[Locally,] the community was really enthusiastic about the scholarship program,” said Kaneohe Bay Commissary Store Director Jeff Dusich.
Heather A. Adams, the daughter of Col. Paul and Mrs. Yolanda Adams and a student at Kalaheo High School, received a scholarship. She is planning to attend Point Loma Nazarene University in San Diego, Calif., in the fall.
All scholarship recipients will receive certificates in honor of their selection as Defense Commissary Agency/Fisher House Foundation scholars during a ceremony for the event.
The Scholarships for Military Children program made its debut in 2001, awarding 400 scholarships to graduating high school or college-enrolled students in four-year degree programs. The scholarships are open to qualified sons and daughters of U.S. military members to include active duty, retirees, and Guard and Reserve.
Minimum requirements are a 3.0 grade point average, leadership activities, and a written essay. The subject of this year’s essay was how the applicant’s community activities have enriched his or her community.
The Fisher House Foundation administers the Scholarships for Military Children program. Manufacturers that do business with the commissary system fund the scholarships with donations that would ordinarily be used for various other contests and promotions. Fisher House accepts the donations and contracts with Scholarship Managers to screen the student applications and choose recipients based on merit. Fisher House and DeCA are not directly involved in selecting recipients.
“This year, the grade point averages of the winners are in the 3.8 range,” said Bernard Cote of Scholarship Managers. “But what’s particularly impressive is the level of extracurricular and community volunteerism military children displayed. It reflects a level of maturity not seen in applicants from other scholarship programs.”
